Closing the Employment Gap for Young Adults with Disabilities

The Center for Independence through Disability Services (CID) helps young adults with disabilities identify and access employment opportunities that match their skills, interests, and goals. The Center provides a range of services, including career counseling, job training, and employment assistance.

The Center’s goal is to help young adults with disabilities find meaningful employment and achieve independence. By providing guidance and support, the Center enables young adults to overcome the barriers they face in the job market. Whether it’s writing a resume, honing interview skills, or learning about workplace accommodations, the Center is committed to helping young adults with disabilities succeed in the workforce.

For more information on the services offered by the Center for Independence through Disability Services, please visit their website or contact them directly. They are a valuable resource for young adults with disabilities who are looking to enter the workforce and live independent lives.

---

The Center for Independence through Disability Services (CID) helps young adults with disabilities identify and access employment opportunities that match their skills, interests, and goals. The Center provides a range of services, including career counseling, job training, and employment assistance.

The Center’s goal is to help young adults with disabilities find meaningful employment and achieve independence. By providing guidance and support, the Center enables young adults to overcome the barriers they face in the job market. Whether it’s writing a resume, honing interview skills, or learning about workplace accommodations, the Center is committed to helping young adults with disabilities succeed in the workforce.

For more information on the services offered by the Center for Independence through Disability Services, please visit their website or contact them directly. They are a valuable resource for young adults with disabilities who are looking to enter the workforce and live independent lives.

---

The Center for Independence through Disability Services (CID) helps young adults with disabilities identify and access employment opportunities that match their skills, interests, and goals. The Center provides a range of services, including career counseling, job training, and employment assistance.

The Center’s goal is to help young adults with disabilities find meaningful employment and achieve independence. By providing guidance and support, the Center enables young adults to overcome the barriers they face in the job market. Whether it’s writing a resume, honing interview skills, or learning about workplace accommodations, the Center is committed to helping young adults with disabilities succeed in the workforce.

For more information on the services offered by the Center for Independence through Disability Services, please visit their website or contact them directly. They are a valuable resource for young adults with disabilities who are looking to enter the workforce and live independent lives.